A Monthly CUPFUL for South Bay Apple Mac User Group Members

Newsletter Format Changes

As Newsletter editor, I want to let our members know that I am changing the newsletter format to address the legal concerns regarding copyright laws. Most digital and print articles are copyrighted, so the articles cannot be copied and pasted into our newsletter without putting the Board members and Club at risk of copyright infringement. Beginning with this newsletter, I am writing brief intros to various articles and then adding the link (and URL on the printed version). This new format has an upside, because it allows for more articles to be listed in the newsletter. The downside of this change is that the print version of the newsletter will not contain as many long articles. There are some authors/publishers that use Creative Commons License which allows sharing of articles more easily, so I will use these articles where possible. Please let me know of any shareable sources of which you are aware. Thanks, Nancie iPadPro 2020

I was planning on buying the iPadPro to replace my old Mac Air. However, I wanted to test it in person first to decide about options. But with everything shut down, it was put on hold.

I read a great review in the July 2020 issue of Macworld, "A Modest Improvement On A Great Tablet". Leif Johnson references features of the 2018 iPadPro: Face ID, improved Apple pencil, USB-C port, and faster processor. This review of the 12.9-inch model, that still has most of the same features as the 2018: TrueTone display and ProMotion 120 HZ refresh rate which makes scrolling smoother than other iPads. All 2020 configurations have more storage: 128 GB, 256 GB, 512 GB, and 1TB RAM, a new A122Z chip with 8 cores, optional new Magic Keyboard case and Apple keyboard, a built-in trackpad, and ultra-wide lens camera system.

A bonus feature is a LIDAR time-of-flight sensor to improve speed and accuracy of augmented reality. The article provides examples of the LIDAR improvements in tests by the author.

In another article, "Three Ways the iPad beats the Mac", Jason Snell compares using the iPadPro with a Mac laptop using Pixelmator Photo ($5) on the iPad with Photos on a Mac and editing podcasts on both hardwares.

So, when the stores open again, I will explore the iPadPro in person with the intention of purchasing one.
